Acknowledgements

This comprehensive guide is the product of countless hours and cycles of revising, modifying, and updating. Truly, without the assistance and expertise of the following individuals, this book would not have become a reality.

First and foremost, I would like to thank all of my Arabic language students and friends for trusting me and believing in me as their teacher. They have inspired and motivated me to improve my knowledge and to write this book.

Thanks to Duaa Allan for all of the early mornings and late nights whilst we created Deewan together. I also want to thank my wonderful team at Deewan for their contributions to this book.

I would like to express my gratitude to Hussein Abdullah for his relentless dedication in designing this book.

Thanks to my family for their patience whilst I sacrificed my time with them to tackle this labour of love, and especially my mother, who has taken the brunt of that sacrifice. I owe all of my accomplishments to her.

Sincerely,

Mohammad K. Ayaseh

Introduction

Modern Standard Arabic (MSA) is the common medium for all formal and written communication in Arabic, and the language of the Arabic-speaking print and broadcast media. It is one of the six official languages of the United Nations and the official language of all Arab countries. MSA is also the common literary language of the Arabic-speaking world and essential for understanding Arabic literature and poetry.

This book is a culmination of my experience teaching MSA and Levantine Arabic to hundreds of students from all around the world. It is the result of my efforts to meet the essential linguistic needs of Arabic language students, and for them to build a strong base in Modern Standard Arabic.

One of the essential goals when writing this book was to simplify and solidify the way language instruction is provided to non-native speakers. Therefore, this book utilizes a technique that we use at Deewan Institute called “The Ladder of Words”.

Each lesson builds on the vocabulary and structures from the prior lessons. Students build familiarity with the words and become progressively aware of the patterns and structures in the Arabic language as they practise reading, writing, listening, and speaking.

I have aimed to make this book user-friendly, with or without a teacher. Each lesson starts with clearly stated goals, followed by structured lessons, supplementary exercises, and recorded readings. Each lesson ends with a checklist for students (and teachers) to monitor their progress.

The Comprehensive Guide to Modern Standard Arabic is not intended only for Beginner Level students, but also to fill the gaps for any Arabic student at any level. It is my hope that this book facilitates both the acquisition and reinforcement of the Modern Standard Arabic language for students of all levels.

How to use this book

This book is specifically designed for those learning Arabic for the first time, however, it may also provide some new insights into the Arabic language for pre-intermediate and intermediate students. The chapters progress from Beginner Low, to Mid, and finally Beginner High, as can be seen on The Table of Contents page. Regardless of your position within this scale, we recommend you work through the whole book as there are different aspects throughout the book that will benefit students at any Beginner Level, as well as higher level students.

An overview is provided on the first page of each lesson giving details of the topics covered within the lesson. Refer to these when looking for specific topics within the book.

Use the illustrations provided in The Writing Guidance table on pages 4 to 7 to help you memorise the alphabet. You can even create your own illustrations to help with memorisation.

Look out for the 🔊 symbol which denotes that there is an audio file available for that section, and use the audio files located on the website to help improve your listening, pronunciation and Arabic in general. The website address and QR code, as well as the password required to access the audio files are provided on the first page of each lesson.

Figure 1 on page 8 helps you with the pronunciation of the letters and shows you the letter exits (where the sound of the letter originates within the mouth or throat).

A list of new words is provided at the end of most lessons in a Ladder of Words. Put all the new words in the lessons, from the Ladder of Words or elsewhere, onto flashcards so you can use them to help you memorise the words before moving on to the next lesson. This can be done on paper cards or using a digital app. There is a wide variety of apps for this, which you can find on any app store, some of which are highlighted in the resources section on our website. We recommend trying a few different apps before storing a large number of words in order to find which one is right for you.

Whilst listening to the audio recordings of the vocab provided in this book, why not test yourself by trying to guess the Arabic equivalents of the English words before they are uttered?

Always do the exercises provided as they will help towards improving your level, and, where possible, ask your teacher to correct your work. We recommend being diligent in completing the comprehension exercises and using them, and all the language you have learnt, regularly, in your daily life.

A Self-Check is given at the end of each lesson to help students understand what they have learnt and what they still need to work on. Be reflective and honest with yourself when filling in the Self-Check so you know what you need to improve on to enhance your level.

If you want to really benefit from this book, it is important to write and record your own conversations using the vocabulary from each lesson, and to ask your teacher or a friend to practise them with you, as instructed within the comprehension exercises.

At the end of the book, a glossary of words is provided. This can be used to revise and memorise vocabulary taught within the lessons, and we recommend creating your own glossaries either in a word document or within a flashcard app, so you can keep adding to them and writing example sentences for these words, verbs, and daily expressions.

How to improve your Arabic

Vocalising your Arabic is an important part of learning the language. Make sure, when listening to the audio, that you repeat what you hear, pausing as required, and also say the words while the audio is playing to ensure your pronunciation is correct. It is always a good idea to record yourself and listen back so you can compare it to the audio and check your pronunciation.

In order to improve your understanding of different Arabic words, and to help with memorisation, make connections between words, for example: find synonyms of words along with their antonyms and try to use them in different contexts. Always write them down and store them with your learnt vocabulary.

Another great way to improve your Arabic is to write simple sentences, conversations, and stories in your own language; then replace the words in the texts with their Arabic equivalent, once you have learnt them, in order to help you practise using the Arabic words you have learnt. Over time of learning more and more Arabic, keep adding more Arabic words to the same sentences, conversations and stories until the whole text turns to Arabic. In this way, you make sure you are practising the words and expressions you learn from the book as you learn them. This helps a great deal with memorisation.

Further learning can be done by using the texts given in the book. The words from these texts can be replaced with synonyms or antonyms, in order to broaden your Arabic vocabulary and enhance your Arabic language.

Introduction to the Arabic Alphabet

خ	ح	ج	ث	ت	ب	ا
ص	ش	س	ز	ر	ذ	د
ق	ف	غ	ع	ظ	ط	ض
ي	و	ه	ن	م	ل	ك

The Arabic alphabet consists of 28 letters. When words are written, they are written from right to left, and the letters connect like cursive English. Each letter can be connected from the right, and all except 6 can be connected to the left. Unlike English, Arabic has no capitalisation.

Follow the instructions below for Deewan Institute's memorisation techniques:

1. Use the visual hints (the shape of the letter associated with its sound) to help you memorise the letters.

2. Start at the position of the star ★ when writing the letters.

3. Focus on the letters in red when you read or listen 🔊 to the pronunciation examples of the English words in the second column.

4. Read and write from the right side of the page, as Arabic is written from right to left.

The Head and the Body

To write Arabic letters within words, it is helpful to consider each letter as having two parts: the head and the body.

■ Head
■ Body

ق س ر ب

Letter Positioning on the Line

A letter's position on the line depends on the shape of the letter. For letters that have a dipped curve, the 'body' (in this case also the dipped curve) is placed below the line, while the 'head' is placed above the line. Letters that do not have a dipped curve are written on the line.

ج د س ر غ ب

Forming Letters within Words

The form of a letter depends on whether it is at the beginning, middle, or end of a word. To connect letters at the beginning and in the middle of a word, we only use the 'head' of the letter, and don't use the 'body'.

Here is an example showing the different positions of the letter س:

End (the last letter of the word): The entire letter (head and body) is connected with a 'hand' only on the right.

س

Middle (in the middle of the word): The head is connected with a 'hand' on both sides.

سـ

(except in the case of one-handed letters marked with a * in the following table)

Beginning (the first letter of the word): The head is connected with a 'hand' only on the left side.

سـ

One-handed letters are marked with a ✱ and are not connected to the left.

Note 1: In informal Arabic handwriting, the dots which make up some letters (e.g. ت) can be replaced with a line for two dots (e.g. ت = ت) and with a circumflex for three dots (e.g. ث = ث).

Note 2: The 'head part' of the letters س and ش can be replaced with a line in Arabic handwriting (e.g.س).

Letters that have similar sounds:

The table below illustrates the vocal exits for a selection of Arabic alphabet letters which students regularly have difficulty pronouncing or identifying. Each row shows two similar letters which can be difficult for learners to differentiate between.

Section 2.1

مُقَدِّمَة لِحُروف العِلَّة والحَرَكات
Introduction to the Vowels

There are six vowels (three long and three short) in Arabic.

Long Vowels

A. The long vowels are the letters ا , و, ي when they appear in the middle or the end of the word.

B. When they appear in the beginning of the word, they are consonants.

C. Long vowels are held for about half a second when you say them.

Long vowels have two possible sounds as shown in the table below:

IJMES Equivalent Sounds	English Equivalent Sounds	Translation	Transliteration	Examples	Vowels
ā	jar	neighbor	jaar	جار	ا
	can	door	baab	باب
ū	food	light	noor	نور	و
	down	colour	lawn	لون
ī	keep	Eid	‘Eid	عيد	ي
	night	home	bait	بيْت

Short Vowels

A. The short vowels are called Harakaat, which literally means “movements”.

B. Each of the short vowels has two possible sounds, just like the long vowels.

C. The short vowels make the same sounds as the long vowels, but are held for ¼ of a second when they are pronounced, as seen in the table below:

Derived From	English Equivalent Sound	IJMES	The Short Vowel
ا	but at	a	FatHa فَتحَة ◌َ
و	full to	u	Dammah ضَمَّة ◌ُ
ي	if bed	i	Kasrah كَسْرَة ◌ِ

Long and Short Vowels: A Comparison

Transliteration	With a Letter	The Long Vowel	Transliteration	With a Letter	The Short Vowel baa	با	ا	ba	بَ	◌َ
qoo	قو	و	qu	قُ	◌ُ
see	سي	ي	si (as in sit)	سِ	◌ِ

The meaning of a word can be very different depending on whether a long or short vowel is used, as seen in the examples below:

Long Vowel			Short Vowel
Translation	Transliteration	Word	Translation	Transliteration	Word
cold (adj.)	baarid	بارِدْ	cold (n.)	bard	بَرْد
fava beans	fool	فول	jasmine	ful	فُل
intelligent	faheem	فَهيم	understood	fahim	فَهِم

Note: Long vowels become consonants when short vowels are used with them.

Section 2.2

السُّكون
The Sukoon

Sukoon is a small circular symbol placed above the letter indicating the absence of a vowel. Since it indicates the lack of a vowel, it is often not written.

The Sukoon (ْ)

Translation	Transliteration	Word
if	law	لَوْ
they	hum	هُمْ
from	min	مِنْ

الشَّدَّة والتَّنوين
Shaddah and Tanween

Shaddah is a w-shaped symbol placed above a consonant to indicate the letter is doubled. In effect, it doubles the sound of the letter by lengthening it.

With Shaddah			Without Shaddah
Translation	Transliteration	Word	Translation	Transliteration	Word
bathroom / toilet / bath / shower	hummaam	حَمّام	doves / pigeons	hamaam	حَمام
he smashed / shattered	kas-sar	كَسَّر	he broke	ka-sar	كَسَر
he changed	ghayar	غَيَّر	other	ghair	غَير

Tanween is 'nunation' in English and it is used in classical Arabic to distinguish nouns and adjectives from other parts of speech by doubling short vowels (FatHa, Dammah, and Kasrah). Also, nunation is used to make nouns/adjectives indefinite, and in indicating the case of the noun/adjective (you will study this in higher levels).

Translation	Pronunciation	Words with Tanween al-FatHa
thank you	shukran	شُكرًا
sea	bahrun	بَحْرٌ
